Adverbials are used to explain how, where or when something happened; they are like adverbs made up of more than one word.

'Fronted' adverbials are 'fronted' because they have been moved to the front of the sentence, before the verb. In other words, fronted adverbials are words or phrases at the beginning of a sentence, used to describe the action that follows.

e.g Before the sun came up, he ate his breakfast.

    Under the clock, he stood and waited.

    As fast as he could, the rabbit hopped.

Add a fronted adverbial to each sentence below and write the new whole sentence into your book.

1. He smiled at the doctor.
2. The snake slithered.
3. She danced and sang.
4. The girls screamed.
5. He cheered loudly.
6. She chuckled quietly.
7. The cat meowed softly
